THE WASHERWOMAN'S FRIEND.

In a very humble cot,
In a rather quiet spot,
In the suds and in the soap,
Worked a woman full of hope;
Working, singing, all alone,
In support of undertone,
"With a Saviour for a friend,
He will keep me to the end."

Sometimes happening along,
I had heard the semi-song,
And I often used to smile,
More in sympathy than guile;
But I never said a word
In regard to what I heard,
As she sang about her friend
Who would keep her to the end.

Not in sorrow nor in glee
Working all day long was she,
As her children three or four,
Played around her on the floor:
But in monotones the song
She was humming all day long,
"With a Saviour for a friend,
He will keep me to the end."

It's a song I do not sing,
For I scarce believe a thing
Of the stories that are told
Of the miracles of old;
But I know that her belief
Is the anodyne of grief,
And will always be a friend
That will keep her to the end.

Just a trifle lonesome she,
Just as poor as poor could be,
But her spirits always rose,
Like the bubbles in the clothes,
And though widowed and alone,
Cheered her with the monotone,
Of a Saviour and a friend
Who will keep her to the end.

I have seen her rub and scrub
On the washboard in the tub,
While the baby, stepped in suds,
Rolled and tumbled in the duds,
Or was paddling in the pools
With old scissors stuck in spools,
She still humming of her friend
Who would keep her to the end.

Human hopes and human creeds
Have their root in human needs,
And I would not wish to strip
From that washerwoman's lip
Any song that she can sing,
Any hope that songs can bring;
For the woman has a friend
Who will keep her to the end.

DISAPPOINTED.

Hugh Beverley never meant to marry. He had been of that way of thinking for ten years or more now, and he was at present six-and-thirty.

His sister, Mrs. Valentine, was therefore quite safe in counting so confidently upon his portion of the Beverley property going to her two little boys, one of whom was his bachelor uncle's godchild and favorite.

Hugh Beverley had no earthly objection to her thus counting. Only he sometimes wished she would not make her anticipations so visible. It would be in better taste to tell them once.

However, poor Clara had always been rather worldly. And with this reflection Beverley folded that lady's last letter and walked down the stairs of the little Tyrolean inn, where he was temporarily stopping in his wanderings, and out upon the covered balcony, which commanded a view of the quaintly picturesque village street.

He had been smoking there with a meditative cigar some little time when hurried footsteps roused him from his reverie, and he saw a slender slip of a girl, very young, and looking very frightened and white, hastily accost the landlord and speak to him.

The man gave some reply, and the girl turned quickly, almost running up the street. Mine host sauntered into the house and presently re-emerged.

"A bad business—a bad business!" shaking his head. "That lady is very ill."

"The mother of that young girl?" asked Beverley, putting two and two together.

"Yes; they've been here some weeks. The mother's been going rapidly. Bad business—bad business! The girl, poor thing! did not seem to fear anything serious. Guess there isn't much money, either," concluded the man, evidently on his own interests intent.

"Who are they—Americans?" queried Beverley.

Yes; they were countrywomen of his, or, rather, the young girl was, for in the course of the night, very suddenly, the mother, whose name was registered upon mine host's books, "Mrs. Robert Ventnor, New York," passed away, leaving her daughter alone.

Beverley did not learn of the death until the next morning.

He was leaving his room when, in the hall, he came upon the landlord and his wife, talking in slightly lowered voices and with expressive shrugs of the shoulders.

A neighboring door stood open, and a stark form covered with a sheet, within, told the tale. Near the bed sat the young girl of yesterday—motionless, with clasped hands and a rigid face.

"There's no money to do anything with," said the landlord, with another shrug of the shoulders, to Beverley.

"Good heavens!" the bitter word appalled; "don't let that stand in the way. I'll do anything that is to be done."

The landlord made a sign to the girl inside the room, and before Beverley could divine his purpose, she stood before them.

"This gentleman says he will pay everything for you," announced the man; "there's something left on the bill, too," he added in a lower tone.

Beverley looked at the girl with a sudden deep pity. She stood tall and straight in her shabby black dress.

"Thank you," she said. No muscle of her face moved.

"Poor child! She is stunned," thought Beverley.

On the next day all that was mortal of Mrs. Ventnor was laid to rest in the little graveyard with its fantastic iron crosses and grotesque beaded wreaths hanging on the same, at the end of the village street, thousands of miles from her native land.

The slender girl, who now turned away from the new-made mound, had been familiar with the make-shifts of genteel poverty ever since she had grown from childhood into womanhood.

She had not spoken a word as she walked back to the house, and Beverley knew not how to broach the question of her plans and movements for the future.

At length he spoke to the landlady:

"You must rouse her from her lethargy. A young girl like that can't stay on here alone in this strange inn. You must ask her whether she has no friends to whom she can write and whom she can acquaint with her condition."

But when the girl was spoken to she answered: "No. There is no one—no one."

Beverley went out upon the balcony and smoked another meditative cigar, in sight of the blue Tyrolean hills, and came to a decision.

Clara Valentine was living in Paris since her husband's death, and she had the means to give this girl a home.

No sooner thought of than done. Beverley had himself announced to Miss Ventnor, and in a few kind words offered her his sister's protection.

"I am going to Paris myself to-morrow. If you will be ready I will take you directly to my sister's home."

* * * * *

"Well, this is about the most utterly preposterous thing I ever heard of in my life! And Hugh, of all men, to be mixed up in anything of the kind."

This was Mrs. Valentine's first exclamation when left alone after her brother's arrival with Lucille Ventnor.

He had telegraphed to his sister in order to take the first edge off her surprise, and then, when Lucille had been conducted to her room, had stated the case briefly.

Someone else might have taken charge of the girl, she said with irritation.

"Who?" inquired Beverley. "She is absolutely alone in the world, poor child! And she was there penniless among strangers."

"Good heavens, Hugh! What if she were? Do you think it was making her lot easier to compromise the girl?"

"Compromise her? What do you mean?"

"Of course it is compromising to her to have brought her here with you."

"She is about twenty years younger than I, Clara, and it is unworthy of you, to bring in any such word or thought in connection with her or me."

"Come," he added, "you have a better heart than you want to show, Clara. Drop a little of your worldliness and be kind to this poor child. She needs kindness sorely. I'm going back to Germany to-morrow, and I shall leave her here with you."

Mrs. Valentine knew better than to make any further demur, but the irritation remained.

"To come all the way here just to bring that girl, and start off again the next day! And then he is indignant because I call it compromising. That a man of the world like Hugh should indulge in anything so crazily quixotic."

Nevertheless, she was not, in her way, unkind to Lucille. She was even, according to her lights, very generous to her, presenting her with a mourning outfit to take the place of the poor child's scant and rusty black.

"She is very pretty," she said to herself, the first time that the girl appeared in one of these plain, neatly-fitting gowns—"very. I wonder if Hugh noticed it?"

Upon the whole she was just as well pleased that Hugh had gone back to Germany.

Lucille had begged, from the first day, to be allowed to take charge of the little boys, and, as the latter took to her very kindly, there was no objection to her doing so.

And gradually she pleaded to have sundry other duties assigned her, until Mrs. Valentine had perforce to acknowledge that she was most willing, most anxious not to eat the bread of charity, and, that which was certainly not the least good thing about her, considerably useful to herself.

The little Parisian household had, therefore, settled down upon a calm and comfortable basis when Beverley, with the suddenness which usually characterized his movements, reappeared.

He never came to Paris at this season of the year, and Mrs. Valentine reminded him of the fact with some sharpness.

"Oh, I thought I would try it," he said carelessly. And he remained on without any definite purpose that Mrs. Valentine could see, day after day and week after week.

Mrs. Valentine's temper began to grow very uncertain as time went by. Her brother did not, perhaps, notice the fact, but others did, and Lucille chief among the number.

One day the gathering storm broke loose. Beverley was sitting unconcernedly in his sister's pretty boudoir when the latter asked him how much longer he thought he should keep Miss Ventnor.

"Why," queried Beverley, looking up quickly, "has she shown any desire to go?"

"She? No!" cried Mrs. Valentine, impatiently. "But you don't expect the girl to go on living in perpetuity this way, do you? I understand, of course, that you thought we might give her a home until other arrangements could be made for her. She must have someone—friend or relation—some kith or kin to whom she can turn for protection!"

"She has no one, Clara," said Beverley coldly, "and you know it. She is earning her living with you, as the poor girl would have to do elsewhere. You need a nursery-governess for the boys—"

"Let her be nursery-governess somewhere else!" cried Mrs. Valentine.

"You have taken a dislike to Miss Ventnor, Clara," said her brother slowly. "Why?"

"It is you who have taken an unaccountable liking to her. I believe you're in love with the girl!"

"Clara!"

Beverley's face contained a note of warning. He had turned pale. But Mrs. Valentine's prudence had forsaken her.

"Yes, indeed, I do think so. Blanche Conway is forgotten at last, it seems."

The words were scarcely spoken before Mrs. Valentine could have bitten her tongue out for uttering them.

She was frightened and sorry. It was a very sore spot in her brother's memory that she had touched. She was going to make such blundering amends as she could when the portiere was hastily drawn aside, and they both saw Lucille Ventnor on the threshold.

"I have heard every word," the girl began. There was not a vestige of color in her face, but her voice was steady, and her gaze brave and direct. "I did not mean to; but I was going through the next room, and I stopped before I knew it. Forgive me, and let me go. You have been very, very kind to me. I shall never forget it. But I must not be the cause of misunderstanding. I see now that I should not have stayed so long."

She paused suddenly and put her hand to her head.

"Never mind, child—never mind," said Mrs. Valentine soothingly.

But Beverley said very quietly:

"Enough, Clara. Let Miss Ventnor do as she thinks fit."

"Perhaps it is just as well that she did hear," Mrs. Valentine reflected when her brother, too, had gone, leaving her alone. "If I can only get her away quietly now, and before anything happens! Of course it would be extremely trying to have Hugh at this late day marrying an obscure and penniless girl twenty years his junior."

Meanwhile Beverley had gone to the ante-room which led into his little nephews' school-room, and taking a book sat down in the window.

A very short time passed before Lucille came hastily through.

She started on seeing him, and made a motion as though to escape. Her eyes were red with weeping.

Beverley quickly laid a firm detaining hand upon her arm.

"I don't want you to go, Miss Ventnor. I want you to stay—as my wife."

The words were spoken. For a minute they both looked in silence into each other's eyes.

"Oh, no, no!" cried Lucille then. "That can't be. Let me go!"

But Beverley, in that one moment, had learned her secret too. He smiled and gently took her hand.

"My child, I have loved you from the very first, since you looked at me with those pathetic eyes the day your mother died. My poor lost lamb, left alone in this bleak world! Do I seem too old for you, Lucille? Believe me, dear, I will cherish you as the apple of my eye."

What other fond nonsense he whispered over the dark head pillowed on his breast it behooves us not to know. Presently he said:

"There is one thing more, Lucille. You heard my sister mention a woman's name. You have doubtless heard her say, too, that I never meant to marry. Perhaps the two things are connected in your mind. I did love that woman long years ago, dear. But she was unworthy. It was a deep wound. I thought it would never heal—but it is obliterated now—gone—forgotten—since the day when I found my poor little girl alone in that Tyrolean Inn! Is all clear to you now, Lucille mine?"

In words Beverley had no reply, but he seemed to wish for none, her eyes spoke.

Suddenly, blushing rosy red, she disengaged herself from the strong encircling arm.

"Oh, what will Mrs. Valentine say?" she murmured. "She will be so—so——"

"Disappointed?" supplemented Beverley. "Poor Clara! I'm afraid so;" and he laughed. "But she is excellent at bottom. She will get over it, dear."

THEIR SIN FOLLOWED THEM.

A Romantic Story of Wrong and Shame.

Many years ago the president of one of the New York railroads had a very clever private secretary, who also, in his turn, became a railroad president. He had a wife and three children.

His patron and employer had a wife, who is a sister to one of the richest men in America and in the world. The secretary met her and the twain were as flax and flame. They cast all honor and duty aside for one another, and away they went together.

She being immensely wealthy, and he being what may be called rich, they doubtless thought that they could defy the conventionalities. They wandered to Japan, Egypt, Greece, Russia, seeking, in the excitement of change, relief from self-reproach. The woman, thinking that time had wiped out memory, returned.

She had beauty, a great name, immense wealth; society should receive her. She dropped the role of penitent, ceased to leave cards where she dreaded they would not be returned, and commenced the formation of a new social circle. She had a box at the opera, costly turnouts, gorgeous entertainments.

But before the season was half over she had to admit that something besides money is needed to obtain a sure footing in New York society.

Her plan had proven a failure. She determined to make another. She did; she made two or three in as many of our leading cities, always with the same result.

Then she determined to go to Paris. She furnished a handsome apartment, paid her respects at the American legation, returned the call of the minister's wife, attended church assiduously.

They were erecting a new church for the American colony. She went to Dr. Morgan, executed many letters, told him her desire to obtain a proper presentation in the society of the colony, and offered him a donation to his church of 100,000 francs if he would assist her.

The worthy doctor personally presented her to several ladies of his flock. One of these returned her call. The Sunday following the magdalen made a return call. After her departure an old friend of the hostess whispered:

"Is it possible you receive Mrs. So-and-so here? Don't you know," etc., etc.

In less than a week the whole society of the American colony was closed to her, and the church lost a donation.

Still she remained in Paris—where else could she go?—and her gay and withered lover, accompanied by his two daughters, came to share her apartments and her solitude.

A few months ago he left her for a business trip to this country. He died a few days back on his return voyage, at a small town on the South coast of England, with not a friend near him. More lonely than a widow she has been for years; what is she now?—[Exchange.

"All Quiet Along the Potomac."

While visiting the beautiful little town of Buena Vista, some time ago, I tumbled on some reminiscences of the brilliant genius who wrote, "All Quiet Along the Potomac To-Night."

Poor Thad. Oliver! Bright, fascinating, brilliant and dissipated. He could make the finest speech of any man at the bar. He was better half drunk than his brethren were in their coolest moments. His puns, his epigrams and jokes, to say nothing of his sweet little poems, were quoted by a large circle of enthusiastic friends. But he lived out his days before he had time to fulfil the promise of his youth.

I can well imagine how that sensitive soul was moved to formulate that grand poem as he stood picket at some lonely post beside the dark Potomac River, while—

The stars up above with their glittering eyes
Keep guard, for the army is sleeping.

He had no accurate notion of the value of his work, and the scrawl was passed from one to another of his comrades, and around the camp fire they read and commented upon it. They were true critics. One of his comrades told me that he had been moved to tears by the lines:

There is only the sound of the lone sentry's tread,
As he tramps from the rock to the fountain,
And he thinks of the two on the low trundle bed,
In the cot far away on the mountain.

And when the battle was over, when poor Thad. had been roughly saluted by the grim messenger, and lay in an unknown grave on a battle-scarred slope among the Virginia hills, then the literati read and wondered.

First one and then another of the sweet singers of the earth were credited with this masterpiece of poetry. And there lay the author, unheeding the wrangling and the conflicting criticisms of those who wisely sat themselves in the seat of judgment.

Hark! Was it the night wind that rushed through the trees?
Was't the moonbeams so wondrously flashing?
It looked like a musket. "Ha! Mary, good-by!"
And the lifeblood was ebbing and splashing.
All quiet along the Potomac to-night;
No sound save the rush of the river;
While soft falls the dew on the face of the dead,
The picket's off duty forever!

SOME WALL STREET TERMS.

"Puts," "Calls," "Spreads" and "Straddles."—These Inventions of Mr. Russell Sage Clearly Explained.

Russell Sage invented "puts," "calls," "spreads" and "straddles." He began dealing in them when he first came to Wall street in 1861, after his withdrawal from Congress, and he has been dealing in them ever since; and the stock markets of the world have taken up this ingenious speculative device of Mr. Sage's and stock privileges are just as well known on the Continental bourses to-day and in the London market as they are here, and they are largely dealt in.

London declares that the nomenclature, so far as "spreads" and "straddles" are concerned, is not refined, and calls them differently, but what they deal in are American stock privileges just the same.

"And what are 'puts,' 'calls,' 'spreads' and 'straddles'?" asked the writer when he first went down on Wall street.

"Well," said the confidential clerk of Russell Sage, of whom the question was asked, "I'll tell you if you promise never to mention the poetical subject again. It requires pretty deft wording to make the thing clear, so it is not an exhilarating subject to talk on.

"You hear a great deals about 'puts' and 'calls,' but I venture to say there are 50,000,000 people in the United States who do not know what they are, nor what the meaning is of the word 'privileges.'

"Now a 'privilege' is a contract by which the maker of it, Russell Sage, S. V. White, Jay Gould or Harvey Kennedy, engages to purchase from the holder in the one case, or sell to the holder in the other case, a number of shares of some specified stock, at a certain price, at any time within a certain period at the option of the holder. Got that?"

"A 'call' is a privilege bought of the maker, at a certain price, and the owner of it is privileged to call for a certain amount of stock at a given price, within thirty, sixty or ninety days, four or six months.

"If a man holds a 'put,' he has the right to deliver to the maker of the privilege a stock at a certain agreed price within a certain number of days. Clear? No. Well, let's try once more.

"Suppose Western Union is selling at 70. A man wants a sixty-day 'put' on it at 66, because he believes the stock is going down. He gives Mr. Sage, Mr. White, Mr. Kennedy or Mr. Gould 1 per cent on the amount of stock he wants to deal in.

"A hundred shares is usual, and 1 per cent is $100. He receives in return a slip of paper signed by either one or the other of these gentlemen. Then if Western Union goes below 66 within sixty days, he may buy it for whatever it is selling for below that price, and 'put' it to the maker of the privilege at the price agreed on, 66, and receive a check for $6,600. The holder makes the difference.

"As you understand.

"If Telegraph does not go below 66, the holder is out his $100.

"The 'call' business operates exactly in the opposite way. A man buys the privilege of calling Western Union at 75, when it is selling at 70. If it sells above 75, you can call on the maker of the privilege for a hundred shares at 75, and the hundred shares are thus bought by the holder for $7,500, and he turns around and sells it at 80 if the stock is selling there, and pockets the difference.

"What about 'spreads' and 'straddles'?"

"A 'straddle' is a 'put' and 'call' combined. The holder of one may 'put' stock to the maker of the privilege or

FRIDAY - - - MAY 27, 1887.

THE Montreal Post, the leading Catholic paper in the Dominion of Canada, has come out in a strong article favoring annexation to the United States. The article bases its reasons on the manifestations occurring during the trip of O'Brien through the province and is causing much comment.

JUDGE THURMAN, of Ohio, has written a letter in reply to one, asking him the question "whether he would accept a spontaneous nomination from the Democrats of that State for Governor," in which he says that "under no circumstances would he accept the nomination." Ill health and old age are the cause of his retirement.

THE St. Louis Post-Dispatch says: It is stated as one consequence of the abolition by the Pennsylvania Company of all passes over its roads, that the county auditors in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are discovering that the railroad is more valuable property for purposes of taxation than they had previously supposed it to be.

JOHN PRESTON, of Browntown, New Jersey, died at his home in that place, on Sunday, at the age of 105 years and 5 months. It was his custom every night before going to bed to take a horn of Jersey Apple Jack, and he believed that it was conducive to his health. Some people, however, think that it shortened his days, and if he had lived in a prohibition State he might have celebrated the next centenial.

LAST week Dr. Hostetter and Mr. Ralph Bagaley, of Pittsburgh, sold a large body of coking coal lands in the western part of this State, along the line of the South Penn railroad. The names of the purchasers are withheld, but the price is said to be about $1,000,000. The transaction is said to mean the abandonment of the building of the South Penn, as the lands were originally purchased for the purpose of securing that road a share of the coke traffic.

ON Thursday of last week two large ocean steamers, the Britannic which left New York the day before, and the Celtic bound to New York from Liverpool, both filled with passengers while steaming through a dense fog, collided. Twelve persons were killed and about twenty were injured. Both vessels were badly damaged but were able to reach New York where the passengers were landed. The steamship companies claim that the collision was unavoidable and that the crews of both ships were exercising every precaution. In their efforts to make time in these days, ships run with precaution at the rate of fourteen knots an hour when they should not run at all and when a collision occurs there is of course nobody to blame.

THE town of Lake Linden, Houghton county, Michigan was on Friday last literally wiped out of existence by fire. Nothing but a crowd of homeless people smouldering ruins, one saloon and one meat market were left at night, to mark the spot, where in the morning was a thriving town and about three hundred and seventy buildings were destroyed entirely, a loss of about $3,000,000, on which there was an insurance of $900,000 to $700,000. The buildings were nearly all of wood and there were no adequate facilities for extinguishing a fire.

EDITOR O'BRIEN is still in Canada. He is enthusiastically received at every town he visits by his admirers, while the friends of Lord Landsdown strive to make it lively for him, and to add variety, occasionally pelt him with eggs, cobblestones and brickbats. On Monday at Hamilton, Ontario, he was given a reception the like of which had never been seen in that city. He delivered an address in the evening at the Palace Rink, capable of holding 2,000 people, and the building was packed until it would hold no more. On his leaving the Rink and returning to the hotel a number of shots were fired at his carriage, the driver John Nelson was shot and Mr. O'Brien made a narrow escape, a bullet passing through the window close by him. On the whole editor O'Brien's visit seems to have been successful in enlightening the people of Canada as to the character of their Governor General as a landlord in Ireland.

A COMMERCIAL traveler was, a short time ago, convicted in a New York court of abduction. There was no denial of the keeping of the company with the girl, but his defence was that she had reached the age of legal discretion. At the trial, the girl appeared in a Mother Hubbard that reached only to her knees, her hair braided down her back, a child's hat on her head, and in the eyes of the jury was the picture of youthful innocence. He was, as we have said promptly convicted, but he was not satisfied with the result. He had been taken unawares and appealed to the general sessions for a new trial. In the hearing for a new trial it was shown that during his acquaintance and before the trial, the girl wore long skirts, a regulation bustle, and all the pads and "improvers" that art and science has invented to adorn and make up the woman of to-day. After a hearing the court decided that the jury erred in accepting the outward visible signs of innocent childhood at the trial, awarded the defendant a new trial and suggested that the prosecutrix should appear in court in the same get up in which she had captivated the drummer and dressed in accordance with her age. With all the modern improvements in women, pads, pimpers, powders and paints, it will soon be impossible even for the Goddess of Justice, in a case where their age is involved, to render a correct decision.

ON last Monday the Secretary of the Interior, at Washington, issued a rule upon the Land Grant Railroads, to show cause why the orders of withdrawal from settlement of lands within their indemnity limits should not be revoked, and the same opened to settlement and entry.

The above action is one that should have been taken long ago. For the past fifteen years a large belt of government land comprising millions of acres, has, by orders of the Interior Department been closed to settlers for the purpose of benefitting the railroad corporations. They are known as indemnity lands and the railroad companies are entitled to, perhaps, one section in fifty, enough to indemnify them for the lands occupied by settlers at the time of the building of the railroads. Yet such has been the influence of the land pirates with the officials under previous administrations that these lands have been for years withdrawn from settlement by actual settlers, and have been in the possession of land grabbing companies who have fenced them up and have had the exclusive use of the public domain for pasturing immense herds of cattle. Official reports estimate that 6,500,000 acres are thus enclosed. The Secretary of the Interior has made application to the War Department for troops to remove the fences around these enclosures, and they must go. Actual settlers have been driven off when attempting to locate on these lands by employees of these companies, and as the lands were withdrawn from settlement by the government the illegal land grabbers had things their own way. Under the administration of President Cleveland the land grabber must go.

ON Monday President Cleveland, appointed Andrew H. Dill, of Lewisburg, Union county, to be United States Marshall for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. Mr. Dill entered public life in 1870 as a Democratic member of the Legislature, and the next year he was elected to the State Senate, where he remained until 1878, when he was nominated to the Governorship by the Democratic convention which sat in Pittsburg, but defeated by Henry M. Hoyt. Since that time he has been in private life, though last fall he was a candidate for the nomination to Congress from the Twentieth district. Sam Josephs of Philadelphia, was an applicant for the position and his appointment was urged by Congressman Randall, but his name was not viewed with favor by the President. The appointment of Dill, is one fit to be made and will give general satisfaction to the Democracy of Pennsylvania.

ON Monday last Acting Secretary Thomson appointed a committee to make an examination of the books and assets of the office of the United States Treasurer, incident to the transfer of that office from Mr. Jordan to Mr. Hyatt. The examination will involve an actual count of all the money in the treasury, including $137,000,000 in paper money in the reserve vaults, $95,000,000 in the cash vault, $90,000,000 in standard silver dollars, $25,000,000 in gold coin and a smaller quantity of fractional silver.

The committee in making the count will have the assistance of 75 persons, including expert counters. It began on Monday afternoon, and can hardly be finished inside of two months. Treasurer Hyatt formally assumed charge of the office on Tuesday.

A DISPATCH from Odessa, in Russia, to London, says that another attempt was made on Wednesday, of last week, to assassinate the Czar. While the Czar and Czarina were driving in an open carriage from a ball given by members of the nobility, a shot was fired at them from the crowd. A great uproar followed and the man who fired the shot was so maltreated by the people that he was insensible when arrested. He was not known and refused to answer any questions.

IN the Dauphin county Court on Tuesday, Judge Simonton handed down an opinion refusing the application of Attorney General Cassidy for a preliminary injunction in the Anthracite Pool Case. The opinion does not state whether the combination is illegal or not, and leaves the question open for final hearing, but thinks that the Commonwealth has failed to show the necessity for a preliminary injunction the granting of which would only be warranted to prevent a failure of justice.

TO STIMULATE mining of every kind the Mexican Congress has enacted a law whereby after July 1, mines of nearly every description and the products thereof will be exempt from State tax or toll, no matter under what name the same may be levied. Foreign quicksilver shall remain exempt from all import duties and interior charges of whatever name, with the exception of the coinage tax.

THE coffee transactions in New York the past three weeks have exceeded in extent the hitherto unprecedented dealings on the Havre Bourse, the largest coffee market in the world. Speculation did it, the reports being that there is a universal failure of the crops throughout the world's coffee belt, which includes Brazil, Mexico, Central America and the East and West Indies.

SOME ingenious fellow has invented a patent ballot box and some interested parties are trying to have a bill passed by the Legislature, of New York, adopting it in that State. It is estimated that it would take $2,600,000 to equip the polling places of New York State with the patent box. It is a blessing that our Legislature cannot get a chance at it for nearly two years.

THE twenty-second and twenty-third Internal Revenue district have been consolidated and will hereafter be known as the twenty-third district. Mr Bigler of the twenty-third district will hold the position while Mr. Dowlin, collector of the twenty-second will be called upon to resign.

Mr. Blaine Will Travel.

It has been our impression that these United States of America afforded the widest field for the employment of political activities, the grandest goal for political ambition, the most superb mausoleum for political hopes. We are not aware that any American has ever found it necessary to electioneer abroad for political preferment at home. It remains for the bold, the fearless, the far-seeing, the unscrupulous but splendid James G. Blaine to stump Europe for the Presidency of the United States.

William H. Seward made the tour of the globe as a private gentleman in search of health and information. Grant received the homage of the world in his dual character of soldier and ex President. Chauncey M. Depew has been a popular feature at European courts, and Buffalo Bill is the lion of the hour in London, but none of these Americans, so far as we know, had political aspirations which he hoped to benefit by foreign travel. Mr. Blaine has.

It is doing the Pointed Knight's intelligence no injustice to say that he'd give his golden spurs and his fairest plume for the Irish vote. He has traveled far for it, has spoken much to it, and promised it everything. There is no Irish leader of importance in this country who has not at some time been the object of Blaine's most tender regard and the subject of Blaine's most flattering attentions.

"But this magnetic, peripathetic
Lover, he lived to learn
By no endeavor could magnet ever
Attract a silver churn."

The silver churn—the honest sterling Irish vote— remains pledged by tradition and instinct to the party of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion," to the Democracy of the new world.

But there are troublous times in Ireland. Her enemies press her sore and close in upon her. Oh! for some fearless tongue to speak her woes, some gallant knight to charge her oppressors

Does any one suppose that Mr. Mulligan Blaine does not see the opportunity of his life? He cares about as much for suffering Ireland as the fisher boy does for the worm, but his is the quick eye, the ready hand, the fertile brain to tempt the gudgeon with the bait. The best known, the most brilliant American of his time, his approach to Gladstone, the most liberal man in Europe, will be natural and easy. Parnell is his next stepping stone, and then come the dinners, meetings, speeches and addresses, which nobody can turn to his purpose so well as Blaine.

We are convinced that this traveler is going abroad to harangue England and Ireland for political effect in the United States. The longest way round is intended to be the shortest way home—to the White House. We warn all true friends to home rule to advance no credence to this political adventurer. He carries honey in his speech, hived by the presidential bee in his bonnet.—N. Y. Star.

A SIMPLE BILL that was introduced into the Legislature early in the late session provided for a tax upon all company store orders, pass books, dividers and like devices used by employers in Pennsylvania for evading the payment of wages in cash. Had this bill been passed in the form originally proposed it would have effectually abated the store order iniquity. But when the bill finally passed through the legislative mill it contained an amendment imposing a tax on all such store orders that shall be unredeemed thirty days after the date of their issue. By this amendment the bill was made utterly abortive, since most store orders are redeemed in less than thirty days from date. In the mining regions of Pennsylvania the store order system has grown into a crying iniquity. Some mining companies compel the miners to take out their wages in store goods; and when they refuse, discharge from employment is the penalty. It is needless to dwell on the demoralization and improvidence among workingmen that must be entailed by such a system. The influence of the parties who are interested in maintaining the abuse proved too powerful in the Legislature. The store order bill, in the shape in which it passed, shows that the "walking delegates" who were left at Harrisburg last session were completely outwitted.—Philad. Record.

The Pacific Railroad Inquest.

The first session of the Pacific Railroad Investigating Commission held in New York closed on Thursday with the examination of Jay Gould. The results of the inquiry so far have been valuable. However the testimony given might be technically regarded in a court of law, it establishes in the unprejudiced mind the moral certainty that most, if not all, of the charges which led to the investigation were substantially true. The appointment of the Commission is vindicated by the methods it has laid bare, whether the Government profits pecuniarily by it in a direct sense or not.

The Commission as yet has little more than touched on the affairs of the Central Pacific, by which the Government is doubtless the greater loser. But Mr. Huntington's testimony in his own defense was self-convicting. Though he appeared to be unconscious of the fact, it was saturated with the atmosphere of corruption. No sane and honest railroad manager gives his agents carte blanche to spend large sums of money without vouchers. His repeated remark that it costs much to "explain things" in Washington was a brazen insult on the part of a hardened dellet of public sentiment.

President Adams, on behalf of the Union Pacific, disclaimed any responsibility for the condition of that property when he took it and knew nothing about book keeping or law. So he felt constrained to leave his accounts altogether to book keepers and his business conscience to his lawyers. Or, the latter's recommendation he was party to a violation of an act of Congress. Mr. Cammack, a Union Pacific director, testified that he voted for a consolidation, not thinking it necessary for a stock director to know about railroad management. Mr. Morosini, the partner of Gould, had not even access to the books of his own firm Mr. Sage made a business of forgetting what it was inconvenient to remember. Mr. Gould's memory was better, but still faulty on vital points. He could not remember whether he profited by certain transactions or not. In short, men able to tell the truth would not tell it all.

Ex Gov. Pattison evinces a searching disposition that promises to be trustworthy.—N. Y. World.

DISINTEGRATION goes on in the Republican party. One of the best known Republicans of New York State, General Isaac S. Catlin, of Brooklyn, who has quit the party, flings back at them his Parthian compliments, thus:

"I cannot continue to adhere to a party in a city where its bolters and disorganizers have successively lost it a President, a Governor, and Mayor, and where finally, by the indolence, indifference and treachery of a large number of alleged Republicans and the incompetency of its leaders, the party has been recently completely swamped. That there is a deep seated and far reaching defection in the Republican party is unquestionably true, and thousands upon thousands of Republicans feel utterly discouraged and disheartened."

Come on erring but penitent brethren. The Democratic fold is spacious and all such recruits as General Catlin are welcome.

COMING REPUBLICAN TROUBLES.—The demoralization of the republican party of this state is clearly shown in the contention that has already begun for the nomination for State Treasurer at the coming State convention. At the recent nominating conventions of the party there was developed a remarkable unanimity of sentiment both as to men and measures, but the indications are that the coming meeting will show a great breaking up of lines, and indicates a wonderful uncertainty as to results.

There are already a number of candidates in the field and each thinks he has the special favor of Quay and other masters. The list embraces in the order of their prominence Captain William B. Hart, of this city, Colonel T. J. Grimeson, Speaker Boyer, of Philadelphia, and Representative True, of Susquehanna county. The latest information is that Captain Hart has the support of Colonel Quay, but Speaker Boyer and Colonel Grimeson lay claim to the same favor which beclouds the matter with uncertainty.

It may be assumed that these conflicting claims as to preference mean trouble. It was such a condition of affairs that led to the independent revolt of 1882, and the probabilities are that whoever is nominated this year will have to meet a condition similar to that which carried the party down to disaster then. The people grow tired of bossism every now and then, and during the past few years they have been afflicted with this evil in an aggravated form.—Harrisburg Patriot.

—The following persons can each receive a letter by calling at the Ebensburg Postoffice, Mr. Robert T. Roberts, William Wesmer, H. C Marchand.

—The residence of Mrs. Reddinger Zane, in East Conemaugh, is situated on a bank overlooking the Conemaugh river. On Tuesday, while washing, she fell headforemost down the bank into the river, and would have been drowned had not her daughter rescued her. She was very seriously hurt about the head and shoulders but the physicians think she will recover

Decoration Day.

A meeting was held at the Engine House, in this place, on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of making arrangements for the observance of Decoration Day.

H. A. Shoemaker, Esq., was elected Marshall, and the following route was adopted:

Fire Company to meet at Engine House at 1 o'clock. Sharp. To proceed from Engine House down to Centre street, along Centre street to High street, up High street to "Blair House," then procession to proceed up Julian street to Catholic cemetery, thence down Horner street to Centre street, thence out Centre street to Sample street, thence down Sample street to Congregational cemetery, then to High street thence out to Lloyd's cemetery, thence back to Engine House.

The following young ladies were appointed a Committee to collect flowers: Julia Connell, Grace Fenlon, Flora Mills, Lizzie Mills, Maud Zahm, Edith Myers, Minnie Secler, Saddie Chule, Saddie Bolsinger, Gertie Larimer, Cora Davis, Jennie Bower, Madge Dick, Alice Davis, Mary Evans, Beckie Cement, Katie Evans, Katie Luthringer, Annie Davidson, May Davis, Alma Rowensteel, Mollie Ludwig, Addie Jones, Aggie Owens and Minnie Leighty.

Flowers to be gathered on Monday morning early, and taken to the engine house, not later than nine o'clock, a. m.

The following persons were appointed a Committee to decorate the graves: J. W. Leech, A. W. Buck, H. H. Myers, Sherman Clement, E. B. Cresswell, S. J. Humphreys

Invitations are extended to all Sunday School, or other organizations, that see proper to attend.

The Verdict Unanimous.

—W. D. Salt, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles: and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at the drug stores of E. James, of Ebensburg, and W. W. McAteer, of Loretto.

The Marriage Law as Amended.

The act entitled "An act relating to marriage licenses, providing for officers indicated to issue licenses for parties to marry," was amended by the last Legislature to read as follows:

The Clerk of the Court shall inquire of the parties applying, either separately or together, for marriage license as aforesaid, on oath or affirmation relative to the legality of the contemplated marriage; and if there be no legal objection thereto, then he shall grant such marriage license; or the parties intending marriage may either separately or together appear before any magistrate, alderman, or Justice of the Peace of the township, ward, or county wherein either of the contracting parties reside, and in the county where the license is desired, who may, and is authorized to inquire of them, touching the legality of their contemplated marriage; and such inquiries and the answers thereto having been subscribed and sworn to by the parties before such officer, may be forwarded to the Clerk of the Court, who, if satisfied, after an examination thereof, that the same is genuine and that no legal objection to the contemplated marriage exists, shall grant a license therefor.

And if any of the persons intending to marry by virtue of such license shall be under twenty-one years of age, the consent of their parents or guardians shall be personally given before said Clerk, or certified under the hand of such parent or guardian, attested by two adult witnesses; and the signature of such parent or guardian shall be properly acknowledged before a notary public or other officer competent under the law to receive acknowledgments, which said certificate and oath shall be filed of record in said office, and entry of the same shall be made by the said Clerk on the marriage license docket as a part of the records of the issuing of said license, and for which he shall receive as his fees the sum of fifty cents, in addition to the marriage license fee, and the said magistrate, alderman, or Justice of the Peace, for services rendered by him under the provisions of this act, shall be entitled to the sum of fifty cents.

The Clerk of the Court shall furnish magistrates, aldermen, and Justices of the Peace, at the cost of the proper county, all necessary blanks for acknowledgments and affidavit, herein required; and if any Clerk of any of said courts shall in any manner issue or sign a marriage license, or if any magistrate, alderman, or Justice of the Peace, shall wilfully make any false return to the Clerk of the Court, he shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, to and for the use of the party aggrieved; Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent either party from making application for such license, by or through any next friend or relative, which next friend or relative may make the required proof on behalf of the person represented by him or her.

NEWS AND OTHER NOTINGS.

—Queen Kapiolina and suit, sailed Tuesday morning for Europe.

—Hopewell Furnace, in Bedford county, which has been idle for four years, has again been put in operation, giving employment to 200 men.

—Thomas J. Quigley, of Norristown, was yesterday awarded a verdict of $5269.58 as land damages against the Schuylkill Valley Railroad.

—About the latest is a glass-bottomed boat, used, according to a foreign correspondent, to gaze upon the beauties of the bottom of the sea at Nassau.

—In the joint session of the Florida Legislature Monday the vote for United States Senator resulted as follows: Samuel Pasco, Democrat, 84; Goodrich, Republican, 17. Mr. Pasco was declared elected.

—The skeleton of a man was recently found in a ruined hut on the banks of the Red river, near Caledonia, Dakota, and in the pockets of the tattered clothing were greenbacks and gold and silver to the value of nearly $5,000

—While a number of young men were playing ball about two miles from Mansfield, Ohio, on Friday afternoon, Ed. Sward, aged 25, suddenly threw up his hands and gave a shriek, falling to the ground dead. Physicians declare it sun stroke.

—President Judge Gunnison Thursday last at Erie, decided against the legality of an ordinance of that city under which a "chain gang" composed chiefly of tramps, was established to work on the streets, and the prisoners were discharged. The issue was made in Court by the Knights of Labor.

—A Newark, N. J., dispatch says: The experiment by the District Messenger Service of mounting the boys on mustangs is proving a most laughable enterprise. The boys have turned the streets of Newark into an amateur "Wild West" show, and messages are being delivered more at the pleasure of the animals than the will of the boys.

—From the roofs of houses and other commanding eminences people in Burlington, Vt., watched through field glasses last Friday a great commotion in Lake Champlain, about four miles from there. Some say it was a squall and water spout, others some kind of a large fish, while one old captain stoutly maintains that it was only a flock of geese.

—John Robertson, of Pittsburgh amused himself, on Sunday, by throwing sticks in the Allegheny river for his dog to go after Becoming excited he grew careless and threw his pocketbook containing $17 far out in the stream. Before the animal could reach it, the purse had sunk, and Mr. Robertson is minus just that amount for his few moments' amusement.

—It is said that two wealthy Chinamen in Mott street, New York, are slave owners. Ah Chan, at No. 18, has a 11 year-old Chinese girl slave whom he bought two years ago for $100, and whom he considers worth $400 now. Kwong Hing Lung, at No. 4, has another girl whom he bought in Canton several years ago for $150. She is 13 years old, and her master values her at $600

—The racing yacht Thistle lost her bowsprit and was otherwise damaged in a run from the Clyde to Cowes, during the gale on Friday. While on the trip the Thistle rescued three men in a life boat belonging to the steamer Hathaway, which had foundered. Sixteen lives were lost when the steamer went down. The life boat originally carried six persons, three of whom succumbed to privation.

—A Bergen county, N. J., rustic invited a young man of New York to spend a day with him in the country. On Sunday in their walk through the woods the city young man saw what he supposed was a sand bag hung there for gymnastic exercise, and rushing up he struck it a blow which knocked a hole clean through it. He is now in the hands of the nurse. The sand bag proved to be a lively nest of hornets.

—On Friday morning Math Stevenson, counsel for Thomas Jackson, Allenport, Washington Co, Pa., who on the 13th inst pleaded guilty to illegal liquor selling, and who was sentenced for the same, asked the release of the prisoner on the ground that the High License law went into effect on the afternoon of the day Jackson received sentence, making all business of this sort transacted that morning void. Judge McIlvaine ordered his release upon payment of costs.

—On opening the will of a deceased West Chester, Pa., lady it was found that she had made ample provisions for the maintenance of her faithful friend—her dog—having left a legacy of $1,500, the interest of which was to be used for his support, and after his death the $1,500 was to go to St. Peter's Great Valley P. E. Church. The provisions of the will are being faithfully carried out in this respect, and the old dog is living high. From present appearance it will be some time before St. Peter's will receive the legacy

—John O. Collier, of Dauphin county, made a happy find last week while tearing down the old dwelling house on his property. Above the old kitchen cupboard, built close by the chimney, was a short joist, and in this corner, wrapped in a linen pouch, were 29 silver half dollars, with dates from 1795 to 1836, in good condition. A supposition says they were placed there by Mr. Isaac Ogle, an old settler, who built the house and lived there until his death, which was caused by falling from a tree and breaking his neck, and the money lay in its original safe ever since.

A fox-hunt recently occurred in Kent, Conn., which was in many respects the most remarkable this country has ever known. There was no anise-seed-bag nonsense about it. The game was a real fox, and Mrs. Monroe, the only hunter, was in at the death. She was feeding chickens in the yard when a fox entered and seized a hen, but before it could escape Mrs. Monroe seized the invader by the tail. Holding the hen firmly in its mouth the fox attempted to drag Mrs. Monroe away to its lair. The heroic woman retained her grip, however, and called loudly for help. It came in the shape of two sturdy dogs, who immediately dispatched the fox.

—It is estimated that the loss to the Cresson and Clearfield railroad Company by the week on Saturday will approximate $50,000.

—John McGoldrick, a miner in the Aurora mines, at South Fork, had his left shoulder crushed by a fall of coal, on Wednesday of last week.

—None but Commonwealth cases will be tried at the June term of the Indiana Court, on account of repairs being done to the Court room.

—Mrs. Mattie George, one of the oldest residents of Washington township, died at her home, on Thursday of last week, aged about eighty years.

—A festival, for the benefit of the Church of the Holy Name in this place, will be held at Armory Hall on Monday and Tuesday, July 4th and 5th next.

—On Thursday afternoon of last week, the dwelling house of Mrs. Barbara Warfel a widow lady of Altoona, was, together with all its contents destroyed by fire.

—On Saturday last a game of ball was played between Leech's School nine and the College nine, at Loretto, in which Leech's nine was defeated by a score of 37 to 19.

—The office of General Mining Engineer for the Cambria Iron Company has been published, and Mr Fulton, who held the position has been appointed General Superintendent.

—At a meeting of the borough fathers on Monday night, Mr. Thomas James was awarded the contract for lighting and cleaning the borough street lamps, for the sum of $6 per year.

—The amount paid out for benefits by the Pennsylvania Railroad Relief Department for the month of April was as follows: Deaths, $14,000; accident, $3,638; sickness, $6,904.50. Total, $24,542.50.

—At Greensburg, on Tuesday the trial of Thomas Riley, for the killing of Robert H. Coleman, which has been going on since Thursday of last week, ended by the Jury bringing in a verdict of "guilty of manslaughter."

—Vallie Lutteringer has just finished putting a metal roof on the two wings of St. Francis College, Loretto. Last year he put some five thousand feet of metal on the main building. Vallie is a skillful workman, and knows how to put on a roof.

—Last week, in Washington county, William Townsend, while plowing turned up a watch which his brother Robert had lost while plowing in the same field fifteen years before. With the exception of a rusted hinge it was in good condition.

—A change in the schedule on the Pennsylvania railroad necessitated a change on the Ebensburg and Cresson branch. Since Monday the morning train goes out at 7:30, and the afternoon train leaves at 3:20; the trains arrive the same as heretofore.

—It was the fellow that looked like Dan McGough, that was promenading with one of our pretty school marms on last Saturday evening. For a time Dan was envied by a number of our young men, but when they found out it wasn't Dan—well no one was more sorry than Dan.

—The Altoona Daily Times has entered on its fourth volume, and is enjoying a well merited and increasing patronage. We hope it may long continue to prosper, and that the proprietors may eventually be ranked among the millionaire newspaper men of the country.

—Samuel Horabaugh was brought to the Almshouse, on Tuesday with one foot mashed and several cuts on his head. He was stealing a ride on a freight train and in attempting to jump off at South Fork, fell under the wheels with the above result. His home is at Baker's Furnace, Indiana county.

—Mr. James A. Shoemaker, of this place, was in Carrolltown on Wednesday, making a survey of the ground purchased by the Agricultural Society, and laying off a race track. It is the intention of the Society to go right to work and have every thing in shape to have a first class fair this fall.

—N. S. Murry has lived for thirty years in what he supposed was Jefferson county, paying taxes, voting and running for office in that county. He got a surveyor to go over his land the other day when he was agreeably surprised to learn that he was really a citizen of Indiana county.

—Late last Saturday night, William Mellon, an employee of the Cambria Iron Company at Johnstown, went to sleep on the railroad track, and was picked up senseless after the passage of engine. He recovered consciousness and, although badly hurt about the head and body, it is thought he will recover.

—A letter from Loretto, informs us that the material for rebuilding the new wing at St. Francis College, is on the ground already, and the carpenters will frame the first story this week, no doubt, by fall the roof will be on. Brother Bernardine has invented and built a new swing for the boys, holding eight persons and some what novel in its construction.

—On Friday last, the Court in session at Somerset refused to grant any licenses and so Somerset is now one of the dry counties. President Judge Baer was in favor of granting licenses but was overruled by the associate Judges. The associate Judges were elected last fall for a term of five years and the applicant for the hotel keepers during their term is not very hopeful.

—The Prohibitionists of Westmoreland county will hold their county convention on Monday, June 6th.

—The P. R. R. has placed on sale in Pittsburg books of 50 trip tickets between Pittsburg and Philadelphia for $35. This is at the rate of $7.08 per trip.

—Mr. George Benfield, of Salina, Kansas, and Miss Jennie Berg, of the same place, a daughter of Peter H. Berg formerly a resident of Cambria township, were married on Wednesday evening, May 11th, by the Rev. Mr. Gottwold, at the Lutheran church, in Salina.

—Right Rev. John A. Watterson, Bishop of Columbus, Ohio, now in England after an eight-months' tour through Europe and the Holy Land, was born in Blairsville about fifty years ago. He is the second Catholic Bishop from the United States to visit the Holy Land.

—Ralph Bagely, of Pittsburg, one of the large Stockholders in the South Penn railroad, is quoted as saying: "The prospects of the completion of the line are not very rosy, for the syndicate has not been able to come to an agreement with the majority of the Stockholders."

—Rev. Father McCarty, S. J., formerly assistant pastor of St. John's Catholic Church, Altoona, will begin a mission at St. Patrick's Church, Gallitzin, May 29th, to continue two weeks. Father McCarty ranks as one of the most eloquent pulpit orators among the Catholic ecclesiastics of America.

—Forest fires on Saturday last threatened the distruction of Houtzdale in Clearfield county. The fire burned over a section of country five by three miles in extent, and on Saturday the Vigilant Fire Company of Altoona was called upon for assistance and started on a special train, but were stopped at Tyrone by a dispatch announcing that the fire was under control.

—Messrs. McConnell & Saupp are still taking the lead in selling clothing in Altoona. They are constantly receiving new goods of the latest styles, and are selling at low prices. No old goods are to be found on their counters, but all new, and of the very latest styles. For spring and summer clothing their stock is unsurpassed. Give them a call in the St. Lawrence block, corner Eleventh avenue and Fourteenth streets, Altoona.

—The Hungarians in the coke regions are leaving that part of the country by hundreds at present on account of the strike. Every train on the Baltimore and Ohio and Southwest railroads leaving that region is packed to overflowing. Six extra coaches have been added to the regular Southwest passenger trains, and still there is not room enough for the departing Slavs and their families. They are leaving for New York, where they will take passage for the old country.

—A wealthy young man from Pittsburgh, who refused to give his name, got out of his berth on Fast Line Wednesday night of last week, and in his sleep, walked out on to the platform and fell from the train near Spruce Creek, Huntingdon county. A watchman found him standing under a tree in the rain, and took him to Spruce Creek on a hand car. He had five cuts on his head, and a bruised hip. A telegram caught the train at Harrisburg, and the young man's clothing and effects were sent back to Spruce Creek. The train was running at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour, and the man's escape was remarkable.

—Herman Baumer, of Johnstown, and Rev. C. R. Dieffenbacher and Elder W. Barnhart of Greensburg, are a committee appointed by Westmoreland Classis of the Reformed Church to co operate with the consistory of St. John's Church in this place, with a view to seeing what arrangements can be made for providing a more commodious and better house of worship for the Johnstown congregation. It is probable that the present frame building will be supplanted by a modern brick structure in the near future.—Johnstown Tribune.

—There was an assault in Conemaugh Borough a few evenings ago which amounted almost to a murder. Henry Hoffman, who lives on a little street between Portage and the river, struck his wife on the forehead with a huge club, cutting several gashes into the bone and knocking her senseless. She did not wish to prosecute and so the matter was kept quiet. The police, however, will call Henry to account. The parties are pretty tough, the wife being a confirmed drunkard and the husband but little better. The woman's head is still in a terrible condition and her eyes are almost swollen shut.—Johnstown Tribune.

—Mr. Abram Huffine, a citizen of Lower Turkeyfoot township, Somerset county, met with a horrible death one day last week. He went to Weakland's saw mill to have some stuff sawed to make handles for reapers, and in the absence of the regular setter employed at the mill he attempted to set the saw himself. In doing this his right leg came in contact with the saw, which was revolving rapidly, and was literally ripped in two up to his thigh. His left leg was completely severed between the knee and ankle. His death was almost instantaneous. Mr. Huffine was about 65 years of age. He was married, but had no children living.

—At a meeting of the Stockholders of the Cambria county Agricultural Association, held at Carrolltown, on Tuesday of last week, the following officers were elected: President, Vincent Relg, of Carroll township; Vice Presidents, Charles Anna and Joseph Bearer, Carroll township; Secretary, R. F. Maucher, Carrolltown; Assistant Secretary, C. A. Buck, Carrolltown; Board of Directors, Alex. Leslie, Raphael Hite, John H. Hoover, Carroll township; P. L. Eck, Alex. Grief, J. L. Walters, Carroll-H. J. Krumenacher, H. J. Hoppel, Casper Lieb, Barr township; Jacob Kirk, Elder township; P. P. Miller, Susquehanna township, and C. F. O'Donnell, Loretto. A piece of ground containing about twenty acres lying just north of the borough has been purchased, and work on the ground will be commenced forthwith.

—Two sharpers worked the "flim flam" racket in our town on Monday night, but were not very successful. They tried the game in nearly every store in town, and succeeded in one or two places in getting small amounts. "Flim flam" as it is called, is an old game and their way of working it was this: They would go into a store, buy some small article, and tender in payment a two dollar bill. About the time the merchant handed them the change, they would discover that they had the change and request the merchant to return them the bill. They did a good deal of talking in the meantime and would try to return the change short a dollar. If the intended victim was easily excited they would succeed in getting him so confused by their talking that he could not tell just exactly whether the change was right or not.

—Mrs. Edward Burk, of Clearfield township, died at her home on Tuesday last, aged about seventy years.

—The grading on the railroad from Newburg, extending up Chest Creek is nearly completed to Somerville's Mills, in this county.

—The dedication of the monument to Rev. Father Christy will take place at the Catholic cemetery, in this place, on Monday next, at half-past one o'clock. A number of strangers from abroad will be present.

—The Loretto Merchandise Company will offer at public sale at their store, in Loretto, on Wednesday, June 1st and Saturday, June 4th, 1887, dry goods, boots and shoes, hats and caps, queensware, hardware, glassware, tinware and other goods usually kept in a county store. Sale to commence each day at one o'clock, p. m., and to continue each evening at 7 o'clock. Terms made known at sale.

From Dakota.

On Saturday last we received a letter from Captain Thomas Davis, of this place, who is now at Spearfish, Dakota. As the Captain's friends in this place will be glad to hear from him, we give it below:

SPEARFISH, Dakota, May 13, 1887.

FRIEND GIBBS—According to promise I send you an account of our trip here, and my opinion of the country. The country from Chicago to Rapid city is very fine, but from the appearance of the ground it needs rain very much; some grasses and orchards would add much to its appearance, but these no doubt will come in time.

The Black Hills are a wonderful piece of mother earth. When you get down in the canyons you have to look up twice before you can see the top of the mountains. The mountains contain rich deposits of gold, silver and tin, and they are fast being developed. Eastern men are flocking in, but as the omnibus man says "there is room for one more."

I was out prospecting and find that a man can make from three to five dollars per day washing by hand; when the Buckeye Company gets their water in, (which will be in about sixty days,) they will then use their hydraulics, and each hydraulic should do the work of twenty men. There are millions of gold here, and if we do not get part of it, it will not be our fault.

Talking about our great free country, here we have it in every sense of the word; you can do as you please, with no one to molest you, you can even cook your own grub.

Some men here build a turnpike ten or twenty miles, but in Pennsylvania we would call it a cowpath, and a poor one at that, but nevertheless, they charge toll, and when you demur and demand to see their charter they show it in the shape of a double barreled shot gun, which brings the pay every time. I will close for the present, with kind regards to all friends in old Cambria.

Truly yours, THOMAS DAVIS.

FRUGALITY, May 23, 1887.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FREEMAN—Dear Sir: About a quarter of a mile North of Dean station, on the C. & C. Railroad is a large stone quarry into which runs a side track, connected with a switch. On Saturday last, the division crew went in on the side track for the purpose of getting ballast and neglected to turn the switch. At this point there is a very heavy grade, and when engine No. 20, came thundering along with a heavy train, and took the side track, it was impossible to check it, and a collision with a car loaded with stone was unavoidable Conductor Stiffler, Engineer Kinney, and Fireman Quartz, seeing the danger jumped from the engine and were badly used up, but fortunately escaped without being dangerously hurt. The engine plunged ahead, ran into the car load of stone which it tumbled off the track, and came to a sudden stop, when it ran into the mountain of solid rock. It was a complete wreck, and a number of men who were working in the quarry made a narrow escape. Messrs. Stiffler and Kinney were taken to their homes at Coalport, and Mr. Quartz to his home at Cresson. The work train of the Pennsylvania Railroad cleared the wreck on Sunday.

Mr. S. McCammant, of Tyrone, was here on the 20th, and contracted for a few of the houses to be built here during the coming summer.

The engines on the C. & C. R. R., took their first coal on Friday last from the new scbute, and the men were well pleased with the coal and plan of loading.

Mr. Bell, of Coalport, has been employed as mine boss. He appears to be a gentleman and understands his business.

Mr. Harvey Gray (a student at the Ebensburg Normal School) was home on a visit to his parents and also some friends at Fallen Timber.

Miss Annie Litzinger, went to Coalport to stay over Sunday with some friends. B.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and gained in flesh thirty six pounds. Trial Bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at the drug stores of E. James, of Ebensburg, and W. W. McAteer, of Loretto.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED.

The following marriage licenses were issued by the Clerk of the Orphans' Court for the week ending Wednesday, May 26th, 1887:

John Sweeny, Clearfield county, Pa., and Ellen Gibbons Clearfield township.

Joseph Zimmerick, Johnstown, and Laura Fogle Houtzdale, Pa.,

Cocaine, Iodoform or Mercurials

In any form in the treatment of catarrh or hay fever should be avoided as they are both injurious and dangerous. Iodoform is easily detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market today is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of acute and chronic cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain: agreeable to use. Price fifty cents.

TO THE VOTERS OF CAMBRIA COUNTY.—Owing to circumstances over which I have no control, I withdraw my name as a candidate. T. J. WILLIAMS.

MORE PROOF.

The proof of the pudding is the eating of it and the increasing business of a merchant is a sure sign of the popularity of his goods and the fairness of his dealings.

Nothwithstanding the wiley schemes of many of our would-be competitors we are daily growing and multiplying. Our trade, so far this season, is away ahead of all previous years and our prospects for the future still brightening.

Let us again assure our Ebensburg friends that their trade is ever appreciated and solicited entirely in a question of the best goods for the least money.

We are still the same Reliable One Price Clothing House and defy any other to undersell us or supply the same quality, make or fit of goods that we command in Johnstown.

In your purchases consult both quality and price and when comparing our goods with those of others, examine critically the get-up, the finish, the make, the fit and the lasting qualities of both. Remember orders by mail will receive prompt and careful attention.

WOOLF, SON & THOMAS,

the only real One Price Clothiers,
Johnstown, Penn'a.

THE BOTTOM IS REACHED AT LAST.

The largest stock of hardware ever offered in the County can be found at my store. I am now selling many goods at much less than I can replace them for, but I will continue to sell at Bottom Prices until I am compelled to replenish my stock. When you want a cooking or heating stove, tinware hardware, nails, iron, glass, trunks and farming implements, call and see my stock and learn my prices.

G. HUNTLEY,

HIGH STREET, — — EBENSBURG

In Memory

Of ELLEN, third daughter of Patrick and Elizabeth Moran, of Loretto, who died, May 15th, 1887, aged 22 years.

Is it strange that God has called her
When her heart was all His own?
Can we grieve that her pure spirit
Like a dove has homeward flown?
Oh! the earth can offer nothing
That would tempt her to return,
'Tis for the stern hard lesson
All who live some day must learn.

As we bow in weak submission,
As we humbly bear the cross,
We shall win the compensation,
For one great and bitter loss.
Let the grass be green above her,
Let her ashes peaceful rest:
While we pray her soul reposes
In the regions of the blest. E.

RURAL VIEW

SUMMER RESORT.

RURAL VIEW is located at Chest Springs, Cambria County, Pa., a rural mountain village of churches and schoolhouses reposing amid scenes of peaceful Agriculture. RURAL VIEW is at a convenient and quiet distance from Ashville, and the Cresson, Clearfield Co. & New York Short Route Railroad.

THIS AGREEABLE RURAL SUMMER RESORT on the mountain plateau, three thousand feet above the sea level, is well deserving of the public patronage. Its environments of rural beauty; the purity of the air, and its copious springs its healthful and genial climate and peaceful retirement from the busy world—all these characteristics commend this RESORT to tired seekers after rest and calm repose.

The constraint of fashionable hotel life is replaced with the ease and peace of quiet home life, which characteristic commends RURAL VIEW to a certain class of health and pleasure seekers.

RURAL VIEW reposes amid orchards and meadows, with the towering green woodland in the background; fruits and vegetables teem in abundant freshness from tree and garden, while the milky herd afford rich white nectar in overflowing measure.

The site of the house is on a gentle rise of ground, the dividing ridge between the headwaters of the Clearfield and Chest creeks, and these streams afford piscatorial treasures in variety to the rod and line of the fisher.

The place is fitted up with a view to the accomodation and recreation of guests.

The roads, in three directions, afford pleasant drives through farming regions, and woodland scenery—seven miles to Loretto, five to Carrolltown, and three to St. Augustine.

Ponds, brooks and streams entice to piscatorial sports, and the woods afford small game in season.

Vegetables in their season will be supplied from the proprietors garden, and milk from the dairy.

A LIVERY will be kept on the place, those wishing to bring their own teams will be provided with good stabling and careful attendance.

The MAIL arrives in the village daily. TELEGRAPH at Loretto, SKILLFUL MEDICAL ASSISTANCE close by in the village.

The TERMS are reasonable, and will suit the most economical. Reference furnished if desired.

Guests for RURAL VIEW will stop off at Ashville, on the Cresson, Clearfield Co. & New York Short Route Railroad, which connects with the Main Line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Cresson, Pa. The proprietor's coach will meet all trains. For further particulars, address,

MICHAEL WALTZ,

COURT PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS THE HON. ROBERT L. JOHNSON, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, of the 47th Judicial District, composed of the County of Cambria, has issued his precept bearing date the 18th day of March, 1887, to me directed for holding a Court of Over and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, and Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in Ebensburg for the County of Cambria, and to commence on the First Monday of June, 1887, and to continue two weeks.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Coroner, Justices of the Peace, Aldermen, and Constables, of said county of Cambria, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day with their records, inquisitions, examinations and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their offices appertain to be done and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the Jail of Cambria county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

GIVEN under my hand at Ebensburg, the 13th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1887, and the One Hundred and Twelfth Year of the Independence of the United States.

JOSEPH A. GRAY, Sheriff.

The Care of Carriages.

The editor of the Wagon Maker in a recent interview with a prominent Chicago carriage builder gained the following information relative to the care of all painted vehicles.

1. Don't forget that the preservation of the colors of painting and lining of a carriage depends in a great measure upon the way in which it is housed. The barn should be airy and dry, with a moderate admission of light, otherwise the colors will be affected. Do not let the vehicle be rolled near a brick wall, as the dampness of the wall will fade the colors and destroy the varnish. Direct sunlight should not strike upon it thro' the widows, which should therefore be curtained or otherwise screened. The coach house should not be connected with the stable or next the manure pit, since the ammonia fumes rising from the stallings will do more to crack and ruin varnish, and ruin colors of paint and lining, than all other causes put together.

2. Don't be in too great a hurry to use your vehicle when you have it delivered—either at first or after it has been re-varnished. The change of temperature from the factory to your coach house may—especially if you have been in a hurry to get possession of it—affect the varnish. Let it stand unused for some few days, washing it with cold water, drying off carefully, and letting it stand in the shade where cold air will circulate freely. This will insure the hardening and brilliancy of the varnish.

3. Don't use the same sponge and chamois leather for washing the panels and under parts and wheels of a carriage. When washing a carriage, keep it out of the sun. Take care not to wet the linings, if cleaning off with a hose. For washing the body panels use a large, soft sponge, well saturated, which squeeze over the panels, so that the dirt will flow of with the water as it runs down. Use a second sponge for the under parts and wheels, and carefully dry each part with its special chamois.

4. Don't allow mud to dry on a new or newly varnished carriage; spots and stains will be the invariable result if you do.

5. Don't use a spoke brush for cleaning the wheels and under parts of vehicles, even when you are tolerably confident that all mud has been removed. If any grit is left on either wheel or bush, it will scratch off the varnish and spoil the gloss as badly as if sandpaper had been used to do the work,

6. Don't allow water to dry of itself on a varnished surface, as this will produce stains. Remove all moisture with the chamois leather only, after the soft sponge has been used.

7. Don't use hot water or soap on a varnished surface.

8. Don't let leather top carriages lie long unused with top down, but raise it occasionally, taking off the strain on the leather and web-stay by slightly "easing" the joints. Frequently unroll the aprons also. If the leather is enamelled, it may be washed occasionally with weak soapy water—not first scrubbed with wetted soap—and the lather then removed with hose.

9. Dont omit to take precaution against moths in cushions and linings. In the case of a close carriage, set a saucer of spirits of turpentine camphor on the floor, draw up all the glasses and close the doors. This will prevent moths from doing damage, and often cure when neglect has to be remedied.

10. Don't neglect to examine the axles frequently. See that they are well oiled, and that the washers are in good order. When they require oil, use sperm oil, such as is always in the sewing machine drawer. Sweet oil will gum up, and should never be used. When putting on the axle nuts, be careful to fit the thread properly, not crossing or straining it. Occasionally inspect the entire vehicle. If a bolt or a clip seems getting loose, tighten it up at once with the wrench. If the tires of the wheels slacken, so that the joints of the felloes can be seen, have them shrunk at once; and whenever any little repair becomes necessary or even advisable, have it done at once, and by some one who knows how to do it.

BIG GAME.—The greatest game of preserve in the world will be held by the Cheat Mountain Sportsmen's Club, the membership of which is limited to 85, of whom 75 are prominent sporting men of Pittsburg, Pa. Compared with it, Tuxedo Park is a mere bagatelle. The preserve lies in the heart of the wildest region in the mountains of West Virginia. It covers an area of 60 miles, and within its limits there is not a settlement. Bear, deer, wild turkey and other game abound, while the cool mountain streams are filled with the speckled beauties that make the heart of the angler leap with joy. The tract of land embraces 50,000 acres, and will be increased by the addition of 20,000 acres. It is fifty miles from the railroad, but is reached by a good macadamized road. None but the most intrepid hunters have traversed its solitary wilds, while only the merry moonshiner has resided within its confines. The bear and deer have had full swing, and the hardy hunters will find great sport in the hunting season in peppering buckshot into this noble game, while there are just enough rattlesnakes loitering on the hills to add the spice of danger to the fun. During the year the preserve will be plentifully stocked with English pheasants, and wild boars will also be turned loose there. A commodious club house will be erected this summer, and experienced gamekeepers will be placed in charge, whose duty it will be not only to protect the property, but the game, by keeping an eye on poachers.

KNOWLEDGE and timber should not be much used till they are well seasoned.

A Good Nurse

Should not hesitate to wait upon those ill with such diseases as Small-pox, Cholera or Scarlet Fever. There is little to be feared by persons waiting on the sick if they will use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid freely. In sick rooms it should be exposed on a plate or saucer, and the patient sponged off with the Fluid diluted. For safety, cleanliness and comfort in the sick-room the Fluid is indispensable.

Happy Homes.

Sit down, poor tired mothers, before you straighten the room; it will do you a great deal of good and can harm no one. What if baby's playthings are scattered over the floor, he will want to build up his town again soon, and you are wearing out fast enough anyhow. Very many of us are making ourselves old before our time by our mistaken idea of "keeping house." I feel to-night like holding up to view a picture that was once in my room, a real picture of life, and such a sad one, too, that the tears will always come when I think of it.

Nine years ago we had five bright little children, four rosy cheeked girls and one stout, hearty boy, all light-hearted and full of romp. Like most housekeepers, who like to see a tidy home, the noise and playthings worried me quite a good deal. I fretted and scolded, oft times saying life had laid a heavy burden on my shoulders, almost too heavy to carry. My plan of "keeping house" often made the little hearts ache, when it should have been my daily care to ever keep them in the sunshine, in order that they might the more surely grow up to be noble men and women, an honor to the land and the pride of the home from whence they came. But my first thought then was for a clean quiet room, and not as it should have been for the tender minds intrusted to my care.

The scarlet fever got a start in the neighborhood. In two days our little ones all lay moaning in their room, in their feverish delirium talking of the days that had passed and gone. Oh, how did my heart keep from breaking as I stood first by one little form and then by another, trying with a mother's anxious care to cool each burning brow. For weeks we watched and nursed and prayed, the family physician telling us there was little hope, and he could not tell which might be the first to go. When I slipped away to the kitchen for refreshments, I found everything quiet and still, the floors clean and white; then I could see my error, and the food I tried to take would almost choke me, and many times did I promise if God would give me back my little ones I would try to be more careful in the future. Scarcely a home in the neighborhood but lost one golden link, some lost four, but after many weeks of weary days and nights God heard and was pleased to answer my prayer. Again the little forms begin to gain strength, the white faces to grow bright, and now I feel like saying again to all mothers, let the little ones finish their play before you begin to straighten the room.—M. A. H. in Practical Farmer.

GIRLS, BE CAUTIOUS.—Girls, beware of transient young men. Never suffer the address of strangers. Recollect that one good, steady farmer's boy or industrious mechanic is worth more than all the floating trash in the world. The allurements of a dandy Jack, with a gold chain about his neck, a walking stick in his paw, and a brainless though fancy skull, can never make up the loss of a kind father's home, a mother's counsel and the society of brothers and sisters. These affections last, while that of such a man is lost as the wane of a honeymoon. Girls, beware! Take heed lest ye fall into the "snare of the fowler." Too many have been already taken from a kind father's home and a good mother's counsel, and made the victims of poverty and crime, brought to shame and disgrace, and then thrown upon their own resources, to spend their few remaining days in grief and sorrow while the brainless skull is making its circuit around the world, bringing to its ignoble will all that may be allured by his deceitful snares, and many a fair one the shame of his artful villainy.—Exchange.

SMOKING UNDER WATER.—Says an expert swimmer in the New York Sun: "It looks very strange to see a man go under water with a lighted cigar in his mouth, smoke calmly at the bottom, and come to the surface with the cigar burning as nicely as if he were smoking in his easy chair. Apparently he defies all natural laws, but of course he doesn't. It is a simple trick, but it requires practice. Just as I throw myself backward to go down, I flip the cigar end for end with my tongue and upper lip, and get the lighted end in my mouth closing my lips water-tight around it. A little slippery elm juice gargled before going in prevents any accidental burning of the mouth. Going slowly down backward, I lie at full length on the bottom of the tank and blow smoke through the out end of my cigar. Just as I reach the surface, another flip reverses the cigar, and there I am smoking calmly. The reversing is done so quickly that nobody notices it."

JEFFERSON'S TEN RULES.—1. Take things always by the smooth handle.

2. Never spend your money before you have it.

3. We seldom repent of having eaten too little.

4. Pride costs more than hunger, thirst and cold.

5. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

6. Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day.

7. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

8. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap.

9. How much pain the evils have cost us that never have happened!

10. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, count one hundred.

A NEW LEASE OF LIFE.

When one has been suffering the agonies of a severe attack of rheumatism, neuralgia or sciatica, and relief comes, it seems as if a new lease of life had been granted. Such have been the feelings of thousands who, after trying physicians and numberless remedies, have used Athlophoros and found to their great joy that this medicine really did cure these diseases.

367 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

After suffering for nearly two years with a continuous attack of rheumatism; after trying almost every specific, domestic and foreign, which in credulity of a wise man, or a fool, might lead one to trust in, it was a double pleasure to me to find a remedy which, originating in the famous "City of Elms"—the home of my ancestors and its first founders—has proved so invaluable a blessing. It is nearly six months since I was led to grasp out the significance of that word Athlophoros. It has proved to me, in a good degree, a renewer of my former vigor and strength, so that I have been enabled to move about with almost youthful activity, and to feel, while approaching my "three score years and ten," that I have a new hold on life. I believe your philosophy of the disease to be correct that it has its origin in the blood, and that your remedy touches those joints and muscles, loosening the nodes, which have been brought into subjection to this dreadful disease, and sets them free as no other remedy that I have tried. I have been cautious for so long a time in recommending it to others till I had tried its efficacy in my own case; and I am now free to state the estimate I put upon it, as the safest and most efficient cure I have any knowledge of.

Being A Boy.

There is nothing in the world of which a boy is so proud as of the fact that he is a boy. He doesn't despise girls, but he pities them heartily. No one has better told the story of boyhood than Charles Dudly Warner. You will all own the truth of what he says:

One of the best things in the world to be is a boy. It requires no experience, though it needs some practice to be a good one. The disadvantage of the position is that it does not last long enough. It is soon over. Just as you get used to being a boy, you have to be something else, with a good deal more work to do, and not half so much fun. And yet every boy is anxious to be a man, and is very uneasy with the restrictions that are put upon him as a boy.

There are so many bright spots in the life of a farm boy that I sometimes think I should like to live the life over again. I should almost be willing to be a girl if it were not for the chores. There is a great comfort to a boy in the amount of work he can get rid of doing. It is sometimes astonishing how slow he can go on an errand. Perhaps he couldn't explain himself why, when he is sent to a neighbor's after yeast, he stops to stone the frogs. He is not exactly cruel, but he wants to see if he can hit 'em. It is a curious fact about boys that two will be a great deal slower in doing anything than one. Boys have a great power of helping each other do nothing.

But, say what you will about the general usefulness of boys, a farm without a boy would very soon come to grief. He is always in demand. In the first place, he is to do all the errands, go to the store, the postoffice, and to carry all sorts of messages. He would like to have as many legs as a wheel has spokes, and rotate about in the same way. This he sometimes tries to do, and people who have seen him "turning cart wheels" along the side of the road have supposed that he was amusing himself and idling his time. He was only trying to invent a new mode of locomotion, so that he could economize his legs and do his errands with greater dispatch. Leap frog is one of his methods of getting over the ground quickly. He has a natural genius for combining pleasure with business.

Farm Notes.

Newly planted grape vines should bear but a single shoot. Layers of old wood may be made.

A roasted or boiled lemon, filled while hot with sugar and eaten still hot just before retiring, will often break up a cold.

Keep large squares of pasteboard hung conveniently to slip under pots, kettles, stewdishes and spiders, whenever you set them down.

To keep cake from sticking to the pan, without using paper, after greasing the pan, sift a little flour in, then turn it over and shake out all that you can.

Clean lamp chimneys by holding them over the spout of the teakettle full of boiling water, then wipe them with a clean cloth. It will make them beautifully clear.

It is said if feather beds and pillows be left out in a drenching rain every Spring, and afterwards exposed to the sun and air on every side until dry they will be much freshened and lightened.

The farmer of to-day with brains and ambition to make his farm pay must clear his mind of cobwebs and his back of moss, and take his garden out into the open field.

Eggs intended for hatching should not be over two weeks old. If much o'der it takes longer to hatch them, and the chicks as a general thing, are not so thrifty.

The Jersey cattle are said to be increasing in size. Those in this country are much larger and hardier than those brought over twenty years ago, and we have better stock here than can be procured elsewhere, not excepting even the Isle of Jersey.

The gooseberry bushes do best when they are well trimmed. They make very rank growth. It is a fruit that does best in partial shade, and if the mildew does not attack it a crop may always be looked for. They are not grown extensively for sale, but every farm and garden should have a space devoted to them.

FARMERS CAN RAISE THEIR OWN TROUT.—It is much easier, says Seth Green, to stock a stream than to raise fish in ponds, because the young fish will take care of themselves much better than anyone can take care of them, and if they are protected from danger until they are forty-five days old—which is about the time the fish culturist takes charge of them—until they are ready to feed, they are then tolerably able to look out for themselves.

In stocking a stream with trout, the young fish should be taken to its head-waters, or put into the springs and little rivulets which empty into it. As they grow larger, they will gradually settle down stream, and run up again to the head-waters in the fall and winter to spawn.

When putting fish into a stream, do not put them suddenly into the water much warmer than that of the vessel in which they have been transported. They will not be so likely to be injured by putting them in water a few degrees colder; but try to avoid all sudden changes, and gradually raise or lower the tempteraure of the water in which and bring them, until it is even with the stream in which they are to be placed.

Perhaps, in no branch of fish culture, are the results more immediate, or more apparent, than in restocking streams.—American Agriculturist.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues, a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in its effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

Omens Good or Evil.

Notwithstanding the widespread enlightment in this free land of ours, there are very day signs and omens encountered with thousands of people apparently believe in. Very probably they arise from a feeling that the end of occult knowledge has not been reached. Many of these may be founded on a basis of fact, although from personal experience there is no ground for believing them. Facts cannot be pinned to uncertainties but no one is prepared to deny the accuracy of the theories on which they are founded. Here are some of the most popular delusions.

Since the beginning of time no one could be induced to have a new born babe weighed for fear too much flesh was being made of the gift. Or would the same nurse think of taking the baby down stairs before taking it up stairs than where it was born, lest it should rise in the world on account of the movement being downward. Nor would course would drive a nail on Sunday, that is regarded as nothing less than driving a nail in the coffin of one of the family. The breaking of a looking glass is an event that no house keeper looks on with equanimity for bow good or ill the glass may be spared. The belief that a life is to be shattered as the fragile sheet of glass is broken cannot be overcome or even dis
